About Classic Tales

Classic Tales is a series of Graded Readers from Levels 1 to 5, suitable for students of English from age six and older. The levels are designed to match the language content of primary English language coursebooks for primary grades. These Readers are carefully written in graded language to provide easy and enjoyable reading. Each Reader is a retelling of a classic story. Most of the stories originate in old Europe, but stories from around the world are also included. The Classic Tales series offers learners a mix of familiar and new or unknown stories.

Reading stories is very motivating for learners. It stimulates their interest and builds their confidence as they find out that they can read and enjoy a book in English! The Classic Tales series also offers students many features that support their reading and their English learning, and a range of different components to help teachers and parents get the most out of the Readers.

Components and features of Classic Tales

The components of the Classic Tales Second Edition are:

- Readers
- For each Reader, also available:
  - an e-Book with Audio
  - an Activity Book and Play

Available online only:

- Teacher’s Handbook
- Photocopiable Templates
- Answers to Exercises in the Readers
- Answers to Activities in the Activity Books

For online materials, go to www.oup.com/elt/teacher/classictales

Reader

Each Reader provides a story with colourful illustrations on every page. A variety of illustrators and illustration styles adds to the attractiveness and range of the stories provided.

Each Reader also has a title and Contents page, two pages of Exercises, two pages of Picture Dictionary or Glossary, depending on level, and the last page has a list of Readers in the series with some information about Classic Tales.

At Levels 1–4, there are 18 story pages from pages 2–19.

At Level 5, there are 26 story pages from pages 2–27.

Story length – the average word counts are:

- Level 1: 540 words
- Level 2: 700 words
- Level 3: 1,130 words
- Level 4: 1,550 words
- Level 5: 2,675 words

At Levels 1–2, there is a Picture Dictionary. At Levels 3–5, there is a Glossary.

To find out how to get the best use of the Readers and for teaching ideas see Using Classic Tales Graded Readers.

e-Book with Audio

For each Reader, there is an accompanying e-Book with synchronized Audio. This can be used to read and listen on a computer, or it can be projected onto an interactive whiteboard.

This e-Book provides the whole Reader as a digital book, and when you turn to a new double page, the Audio of these pages begins automatically so you can read and listen at the same time. You can turn the volume down if you don’t require the Audio.

The Audio is a recording of the full story text in American English. The words listed in the Picture Dictionary or Glossary are also recorded. Alternatively, a CD player can be used to listen to the Audio.

To find out how to get the best use of the e-Books and Audio and for teaching ideas see Using a Classic Tales e-Book with Audio.

Activity Book and Play
For each Reader, there is an accompanying Activity Book and Play. This provides ten pages of activities, followed by a Play based on the Classic Tales story. There are also some Teacher’s Notes on how to use the play on the inside back cover of the Activity Book.

The activities include a Before Reading activity. The remaining activities are designed for students to do after they have read certain story pages, and grey tabs clearly show which story pages the activities link to.

The Play is designed to be used after students have read the Classic Tales story. The Play is shorter than the story, but uses the same language. Students can either speak the Play or perform it.

To find out how to get the best use of the Activity Books and Plays and for teaching ideas see Using a Classic Tales Activity Book and Play.

Teacher’s Handbook
This Teacher’s Handbook provides an overview of the Classic Tales series. It will help you plan how you will use the Readers and accompanying components — whether you want to plan lessons around the Readers or help your students to read them independently for pleasure.

There are teaching suggestions in the sections on ‘Using Classic Tales Graded Readers,’ ‘Using a Classic Tales e-Book with Audio’ and ‘Using a Classic Tales Activity Book and Play’. You can adapt these suggestions to specific Readers and teaching contexts.

There are also Photocopiable Templates. These will support your teaching and the teaching suggestions in this Teacher’s Handbook, and they will help you get a lot of reading, writing, listening, and speaking practice from any Classic Tales Reader.

What is new in this Second Edition of Classic Tales?
The Readers now have new illustrations, new Exercises, and a new Picture Dictionary or Glossary. They also have a new design to ensure clear readability, and new covers which give a contemporary look to the series, making it more attractive to students. The look and feel of all the Readers reflect current picture books and storybooks for native speakers, to support enjoyment and motivation.

Using Classic Tales Graded Readers

Stories
The Classic Tales series provides a wonderful variety of stories for use in the language classroom. The stories are carefully written in graded language to provide easy and enjoyable reading, and at the same time they offer the benefits that stories can bring to the language classroom. Stories are a feature of all cultures and have universal appeal – everybody loves a story! Students will know stories in their own language, and they will be familiar with the way stories work. Students will be motivated to read stories in their language classroom – it’s a very natural way to learn a new language. Stories present language in meaningful contexts, and they provide a springboard for practising a variety of language and other skills. The story themes also give a context for more general discussions about values and life experiences.

Language Skills
The features within each Reader are designed to support students in understanding and enjoying the text, and in improving their language skills. The text in the stories provides many natural opportunities for language to be repeated and recycled. This allows the student to assimilate patterns and chunks, and also brings a lot of pleasure for young learners – and learners of any age!

The illustrations enrich and broaden the reading experience, and support vocabulary and story understanding. Exercises offer consolidation of story understanding and language, and new vocabulary is supported by the Picture Dictionary or Glossary.

To develop speaking skills, you can ask students questions before you tell the story, or before they read the story, in order to engage them in discussion. You can also build on these questions to stimulate discussion after the story.

The Exercises at the back of the Reader are designed to be done after reading the story, and they provide integrated reading and writing practice, with a variety of activity types at word and sentence level, such as labelling, completing sentences, yes/no sentences, answering questions, correcting sentences, ordering words, and doing puzzles.

For more language practice you can also use some of the Before Reading and After Reading ideas on page 6. And for each Reader there is an accompanying e-Book with Audio. To find out how to get the best use of the e-Books and Audio and for teaching ideas see Using a Classic Tales e-Book with Audio.

Each Activity Book provides Exercises and a Play for additional language practice. To find out how to get the best use of the Activity Books and Plays and for teaching ideas see Using a Classic Tales Activity Book and Play.

Cross-Curricular Links and Critical Thinking Skills
The stories provide a number of opportunities for cross-curricular links. For example, you can use the content of the stories as a springboard for other activities related to the content. You can also use some of the After Reading ideas below, for example: activities with a world map, making props, puppets, or masks for performing the story, making mini storybooks or cartoon strips.

The stories also provide opportunities for developing critical thinking skills, as students need not only understand English, but must also process concepts in the story content. The Photocopiable Templates provide activities to develop these skills, such as organizing information into charts, sequencing or correcting information, giving personal opinions, or writing notes.

Values
The Readers remain as true as possible to the original stories, and they often promote values which can be encouraged: for example, kindness, unselfishness, courage, friendship, cooperation, tolerance, and optimism. The stories should make students think, and they can help them to discuss what is right or wrong, and what is good or bad behaviour.

Whole-Class Storytelling
You can use the Readers as storybooks that you can read to the whole class during a ‘story time’ part of a lesson. Students can sit on the floor or on chairs around you, and you can tell the story using the Reader, or the e-Book on a computer or projected onto a whiteboard. For whole-class storytelling teaching ideas and to find out how to get the best use of the e-Books with Audio see Using a Classic Tales e-Book with Audio.

Class Readers
The Readers can also be used as Class Readers that are read by students with or without your support. Students can use the accompanying e-Book with Audio for individual support. If students are reading different Readers, they can work at their own pace. You can check their understanding by asking simple questions, for example: Who is your favourite character? What is your favourite picture/page? Why? If students are also doing the Exercises at the back of the book, you can check these orally.

If a whole class is reading the same Reader, you can use some of the Before Reading and After Reading ideas on page 6.
Before Reading

If you are working with the whole class, you can introduce the story, check on previous knowledge, and stimulate students’ interest with some of the following activities:

- Show the cover, first hiding the title, and ask students what they think the story will be about, and what they know about the topic, for example: What is the title of this story? What is the story about? What do you know about ...? Who/What can you see in the picture? Where are they? What are they doing?
- Ask students to look at the illustrations in the Reader to see if they can guess what the story will be about. In Levels 1–2, students can also read the text in speech bubbles.
- Ask students what vocabulary they know about the topic, and ask them to guess what vocabulary will be in the story. You can write all the vocabulary on the board, and also introduce any key vocabulary from the Picture Dictionary or Glossary that you think students will need. Or you can leave students to find the new vocabulary at the back of the Reader when they need it.
- If the story is set in a particular country or includes content from around the world, you can use a globe or world map to show students where the places are, or you can ask them to find them in an atlas and mark them on a map. You can use the World Map Photocopiable Template on page 9.

After Reading

After finishing the story, students can do the Exercises at the back of the Reader. In a mixed-ability class, students can read the story at their own pace and go straight to the Exercises when they are ready. Checking the Exercises orally means that they practice their speaking and listening skills.

You can use the following activities to check how much students have understood. They will also provide opportunities for revision and further practice with some of the following activities. You will need to adapt these activities according to your students’ abilities, and some are more appropriate for students who are all using the same Reader.

- Invite students to give personal responses to the story, either in English or in their own language. For example: Did you like the story? What is your favourite picture/character, and why?
- Say or write verbs or phrases from the story and ask students to mime them.
- Say or write sentences from the story – some true and some false – and ask students to say or write if they are true or false.
- Depending on their level, ask students to say or write three, five, or ten things about the story.
- Students complete a book report or story summary. You can use the My Story Report Photocopiable Templates on pages 10–11, or the Story Summary Photocopiable Template on page 12.
- In Levels 1–2, the Picture Dictionary is a great resource for practice of key vocabulary after reading. Show or say the words and ask students to match them to the pictures, or show the pictures and ask students to say or write the words. In Levels 3–5, you can do the same with the Glossary, either with the pictures or the definitions.
For each Reader there is an accompanying e-Book with synchronized Audio. Students can read and listen to the story on a computer, or you can project the story onto an interactive whiteboard for the whole class to follow.

The e-Book provides the whole Reader as a digital book, and when you turn to a new double page, the Audio of these pages automatically begins so you can read and listen at the same time. You can turn the volume down if you don’t require the Audio.

The Audio is a recording of the full story text in American English. The words listed in the Picture Dictionary or Glossary are also recorded. Alternatively, the CD can be used on a CD player to listen to the Audio.

Individual Use

Students can use the accompanying e-Book with Audio to read the story for the first time, or they can use it after they have read the Reader.

To raise awareness of pronunciation and intonation, students can listen to the Audio as they read the story. For active practice of pronunciation and intonation, students can listen and read out loud at the same time, or pause the Audio after paragraphs and then repeat what they heard.

Whole-Class Storytelling

The e-Book with Audio provides the perfect resource to support shared storytelling with the whole class. There is a strong link between reading success in school and early reading experiences at home when parents or others read to children from an early age. Research shows that shared reading between parent and child is the foundation for early literacy, the shared storytelling approach is an extension of this concept into the classroom. With shared storytelling, you can create a relaxed and interactive environment with a focus on reading for meaning and enjoyment.

Most of the activities described below can also be done with a Reader, but by projecting an e-Book onto an interactive whiteboard you can create a more participative storytelling experience that will attract students’ attention and sustain their enthusiasm. Once projected onto a whiteboard, the e-Book creates a digital big book. With the story text and images enlarged, all students can focus on the story, and class participation and attention will be enhanced. Enlarged text and images allow all students to easily see the text and images as you read the story aloud – a vital similarity to the shared reading between parent and child.

Here are some activities for whole-class storytelling. You can also use some of the Before Reading and After Reading activities suggested on page 6.

These activities can be used the first time you read the story:

- Practise reading the story out loud beforehand, and think about how you can use expression, mime, and gestures to increase the dramatic effect and to support understanding.
- When you read the story to the class, don’t rush – enjoy it! It is very important to make the reading experience an enjoyable one.

- It is a good idea to read the story over a few lessons, as this provides more opportunities for repetition and consolidation, increases interest and anticipation, and maximizes the pedagogic value of the story.
- As you read, follow the text with your finger or a pointer. This ensures that students can see exactly what you are reading and they learn to associate sound with the printed symbol.
- You can ask questions to show what you are thinking about the story, and to encourage students to do the same: I wonder if this story is going to be about ... This is a new word. What does it mean ...? I wouldn’t do that because ... (With very young learners this can be done in the students’ first language.)
- Pause from time to time to allow students to predict the words or phrases that should follow. Or you can stop and ask students to predict what will happen next in the story: What happens next?
- Just before showing the last two pages, you can ask students to predict how the story will end: How does the story end?

These activities can be used on subsequent readings:

- Students can listen to the Audio as they follow the story with you.
- Pause from time to time and ask students to tell the story: What happens first? What happens next?
- Pause from time to time and do a quick memory test: What colour is the ... How many ... are there? What is his/her name? Where is ...?
For each Reader, there is an accompanying Activity Book and Play. This provides ten pages of activities, followed by a Play based on the Classic Tales story. There are also some Teacher’s Notes on how to use the play on the inside back cover of the Activity Book.

Activities
The activities provide additional reading and writing practice. The activities include a Before Reading activity. The remaining activities are designed for students to do after they have read certain story pages, and grey tabs clearly show which story pages the activities link to.

Play
The Play provides additional language practice – and can also involve cross-curricular and collaborative skills! It is designed to be used after students have read the Classic Tales story, and it is a perfect way to consolidate the story language. The Play is shorter than the story, but uses the same language.

Students can either speak the Play or if there is more time, they can perform it for other classes, the whole school, or parents. Students can speak or perform the play as a whole class, or they can work in smaller groups.

At the start of the Play, there is a list of Characters. This always includes a Chorus. The words of the Chorus can be spoken or performed by one or many students. In the lower levels, there are also some characters that do not have speaking parts. This means that the whole class can be involved, even if they do not speak.

Your students can perform the play in their school clothes, or they can make masks and/or costumes to wear. Students can make props for when they are performing the play.

Alternatively, students can make puppets for the characters and then speak the play whilst using the puppets.

Students can also write their own variation on the story, and then perform it! For further suggestions, see the Teacher’s Notes on the inside back cover of the Activity Book.

You can use the Photocopiable Templates to support some of the activities in the teaching suggestions above. They can be adapted to suit your students’ abilities. The following Photocopiable Templates are provided:

World Map
If the story is set in a particular country or includes content from around the world, you can use the world map to show students where the places are, or you can ask them to find them in an atlas and mark them on the map. Students can do this before or after reading the story.

My Story Report (Levels 1–2)
My Story Report (Levels 3–5)
Story Summary
After students have read the whole story, ask them to complete a book report or story summary.

Story Words Jigsaw
Create a Story Words Jigsaw with words and pictures from the Picture Dictionary or Glossary, or words and definitions from the Glossary. Then make copies and ask students to cut up the jigsaw, muddle up the pieces, and then put the jigsaw together again. You can also give students blank templates and they can create their own jigsaws for other students to complete. Students can do this before or after reading the story.

My Favourite Words (Levels 1–2)
My Favourite Words (Levels 3–5)
After students have read the whole story, ask them to choose their favourite and/or new words from the story and illustrate them.

Muddled Sentences
Put key sentences from the story in a muddled order. You can also split each sentence in half, and muddle up the words, to make the activity more challenging. After students have read the whole story, give students copies of the muddled sentences and ask them to put them in the correct order. You can also give students blank templates and they can create their own muddled sentences for other students to complete.
